5. Write an essay to compare and contrast on any One of the following:

- a) Paper books vs E-books
- b) Artificial Intelligence vs Human Intelligence
- c) Video Games vs Outdoor Games

ANSWER:a) PAPER BOOKS VS E-BOOKS

The debate between e-books and paper books has been ongoing for several years, with each side having its own set of advantages and disadvantages.

On the one hand, paper books offer a tactile experience that many readers cherish. The feel of paper between their fingers, the sound of pages turning and the smell of ink and paper create a sensory experience that e-books cannot replicate. Additionally, paper books do not require any device or electricity to read, making them accessible anywhere and at any time. Furthermore, paper books can be shared, lent, or passed down to others, creating a sense of community and connection among readers.

On the other hand, e-books offer convenience, portability, and accessibility. They can be stored on a single device, taking up minimal space, and can be accessed with just a few clicks. E-books also offer adjustable font sizes, brightness, and lighting, making them easier to read for people with visual impairments. Moreover, e-books can be easily updated, corrected, or expanded, ensuring that readers have access to the most accurate and up-to-date information.

However, e-books also have some drawbacks. They require a device to read, which can be a distraction, and the blue light emitted from screens can cause eye strain and disrupt sleep patterns. Moreover, e-books can be easily pirated or copied, raising concerns about copyright and intellectual property. In contrast, paper books offer a sense of ownership and permanence that e-books lack.

In conclusion, both e-books and paper books have their own strengths and weaknesses. While paper books offer a tactile experience and sense of personal preference, e-books offer convenience, portability, and accessibility. Ultimately, the choice between e-books and paper books comes down to the traditional feel of paper books, while others may prefer the ease of e-books. As technology continues to evolve, it is likely that both formats will coexist and complement each other, offering readers a range of options to suit their needs.

b) ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE VS HUMAN INTELLIGENCE

Artificial intelligence (AI) and human intelligence are two distinct forms of cognitive ability that have sparked debate about their capabilities and potential. Human intelligence is a natural, evolved trait that enables us to learn, reason, and adapt to complex situations. It is rooted in emotions, experiences, and social interactions, making it inherently creative and intuitive. In contrast, AI is a programmed, computational intelligence designed to perform specific tasks, such as data analysis, pattern recognition, and decision-making.

AI has made tremendous progress in recent years, surpassing human capabilities in areas like processing speed, memory, and accuracy. AI systems can analyze vast amounts of data, identify patterns, and make predictions with precision, making them invaluable in fields like medicine, finance, and transportation. However, AI lacks the contextual understanding, emotional depth, and critical thinking that human intelligence provides. AI is limited to its programming and data, whereas human intelligence can adapt, learn from mistakes, and innovate in ways that AI currently cannot.

Moreover, human intelligence is uniquely capable of creativity, empathy, and moral reasoning, essential qualities for complex decision-making and social interactions. While AI can generate art, music, or writing, it lacks the emotional resonance and originality that human creators bring to their work. Similarly, AI systems struggle to understand the nuances of human emotions, leading to potential misapplications in areas like healthcare, education, or customer service.

In conclusion, AI and human intelligence are complementary, not mutually exclusive. While AI excels in processing and analyzing data, human intelligence provides the creative, emotional, and social context that AI lacks. By acknowledging and leveraging the strengths of both, we can harness the power of AI to augment human capabilities, leading to breakthroughs in various fields and improving our collective well-being.

c) VIDEO GAMES VS OUTDOOR GAMES

The debate between video games and outdoor games has been a longstanding one, with each side having its own set of advantages and disadvantages. Video games, played on screens, offer a virtual world of entertainment, socialization, and skill-building, all from the comfort of one's own home. They provide an escape from reality, improve hand-eye coordination, and enhance problem-solving abilities. However, excessive gaming can lead to a sedentary lifestyle, contributing to health problems like obesity, eye strain, and decreased physical fitness.

On the other hand, outdoor games, played in natural environments, offer a wealth of benefits that video games cannot match. They promote physical activity, vitamin D production, and exposure to fresh air, leading to improved overall health and wellbeing. Outdoor games like sports, tag, hide-and-seek encourage social interaction, teamwork, and communication skills, essential for building strong relationships and emotional intelligence. Moreover, outdoor games foster a connection with nature, teaching children about the environment and promoting a sense of responsibility.

Despite the benefits of outdoor games, video games have their own unique advantages. They provide a safe space for children to explore, experiment, and learn from their mistakes without fear of physical harm. Video games also offer a platform for socialization, with many games allowing players to connect with others worldwide. Furthermore, video games can be adapted to suit different ages, abilities, and interests, making them an inclusive form of entertainment.

In conclusion, both video games and outdoor games have their own strengths and weaknesses. Rather than pitting them against each other, a balanced approach that incorporates both into one's lifestyle is ideal. By allocating time for outdoor activities and video games, individuals can reap the benefits of physical exercise, socialization, and virtual exploration, leading to a healthier, happier, and more well-rounded life.

5. Write a narrative account on street crime.

ANSWER:

STREET CRIME

It was a chilly winter evening when Sarah, a young professional, was walking home from work. As she turned the corner onto her street, she noticed a group of suspicious individuals lurking in the shadows. Suddenly, one of them stepped forward, blocking her path. Sarah tried to cross the street, but they surrounded her, demanding her valuables.

In a split second, Sarah's phone and wallet were snatched from her hands. The group dispersed as quickly as they appeared, leaving Sarah shaken and alone. She rushed to the nearest police station to report the incident. Meanwhile, just a few blocks away, a similar scenario unfolded. Mark, a tourist, was exploring the city when he was approached by a pickpocket. The thief expertly stole Mark's camera and cash, disappearing into the crowd before he could react.

These incidents are just a glimpse into the world of street crime, a pervasive problem plaguing urban areas. From petty theft to violent muggings, street crime can have a profound impact on individuals and communities. The constant fear of being targeted can erode trust and make people feel vulnerable.

As authorities struggle to combat street crime, residents are left to wonder if their neighborhoods are safe. The need for increased vigilance, community engagement, and effective law enforcement strategies has never been more pressing. Only through collective efforts can we reclaim our streets and restore a sense of security for all.

—OR—Write an essay to compare and contrast on any one of the following:
i) Village Life v/s City Life (ii) Science v/s Arts

ANSWER:

VILLAGE LIFE V/S CITY LIFE

Village life and city life are two distinct ways of living, each with its own unique characteristics and advantages. Village life is peaceful and serene, with a strong sense of community and connection to nature. In contrast, city life is fast-paced and dynamic, offering a wider range of opportunities and amenities.

In villages, people live in harmony with the environment, relying on agriculture and natural resources for their livelihood. The air is fresh, and the atmosphere is calm, allowing residents to lead a healthy and relaxed lifestyle. On the other hand, cities are hubs of industrial and commercial activity, providing access to better education, healthcare, and career opportunities. However, city life can be stressful and polluted, with a higher cost of living.

Despite these differences, both village and city life have their own charm. Villages offer a sense of belonging and social bonding, while cities provide anonymity and freedom. Ultimately, the choice between village life and city life depends on individual preferences and priorities.

In conclusion, village life and city life are two contrasting ways of living, each with its own strengths and weaknesses. While villages offer peace and tranquility, cities provide opportunities and excitement. A balanced approach, combining the benefits of both, would be ideal.

SCIENCE V/S ARTS

Science and art are two fundamental aspects of human culture, often viewed as mutually exclusive. Science is associated with logic, reason, and empirical evidence, whereas art is linked to creativity, intuition, and emotional expression. However, this dichotomy is not absolute, and the two disciplines have more in common than we often acknowledge. Science and art both involve observation, experimentation, and innovation. Scientists observe the natural world, experiment with hypotheses, and innovate new theories and technologies. Similarly, artists observe human experience, experiment with mediums and techniques, and innovate new forms of expression. Both scientists and artists seek to understand and describe the world around them, albeit through different lenses.

Moreover, science and art inform and enrich each other. Scientific discoveries have inspired countless works of art, from Leonardo da Vinci's anatomical drawings to the futuristic landscapes of science fiction. Conversely, artistic expression has driven scientific innovation, as seen in the designs of architects, engineers, and product designers.

In conclusion, the distinction between science and art is not a rigid one. Both disciplines share common goals, methods, and inspirations. By embracing the intersections and interplay between science and art, we can foster a more holistic understanding of the world and unlock new possibilities for creativity and innovation.

2. i) What was the Quaid's vision about religious freedom?

ANSWER: The vision of Quaid-e-Azam about religious freedom is "The first duty of a government is to maintain law and order, so that the State fully protects the life, property and religious beliefs of its subjects. No power can hold another nation in subjection. Therefore, we must learn a lesson from this. You are free; you are free to go to your temples, you are free to go to your mosques or to any other places of worship in this State of Pakistan. You may belong to any religion or caste or creed – that has nothing to do with the business of the State. We are starting in the days when there is no discrimination, no distinction between one community and another, no discrimination between one caste and creed and another. We are starting with this fundamental principle that we are all citizens and equal citizens of one State".

The chief guest was the mayor of our city. Parents were also invited to attend the event. The faculty team of our college supervised along with volunteers.

Various sports were organized in the sports week which included cricket, hockey, high jump, long jump etc. The first two days of this week's sports were cricket matches in which all the teams participated in the first round. The second day was the competition between the winner's teams.

In cricket, the first-year commerce team and the second-year science team were undefeated. According to the program, the final match will be held on the last day of sports week.

On the third day, there were only four teams for hockey, out of which the Second Year Arts team was declared the winner. The second-year arts team scored two goals in the second half while the science team did not score any goals.

5. Write a narrative account of 'First day of your college'.

ANSWER:

FIRST DAY OF YOUR COLLEGE

The first day of college is really very special and memorable for every student. The first of anything impresses us the most. That is why we hardly ever forget our first success, our first friend. Likewise, we cannot forget our first day at college, the day that symbolizes the transition period from one life, so to say, into another. It comes to my mind again and again with alien but lively feelings, those impressions, and sights and sounds. On the very first day, I got up early in the morning as I was much ready for the college. I offered Dawn Prayer and took a hearty bath soon as I stepped into the college, I felt like I have entered a new world which was indeed a completely new world for me. The college had a wonderful building, lovely playgrounds and devoted Professors. The grand tradition, good mannerism, and liberal atmosphere made a great difference to me. My first-day entry in college always fascinates me. My first day is an unforgettable experience of my educational life.

However, on that day, when the class was dismissed, I came back direct in the afternoon with vigour, happiness, experience, and freedom. Still, the memory and impact of that day haunt me like a passion. It was a day of observing and experiencing new things. The memory of that day at college will remain fresh in my mind forever.

5. (OR) Write an essay to compare and contrast on any One of the following

* School life v/s College life

* Cricket v/s Hockey

SCHOOL LIFE V/S COLLEGE LIFE

There is a great deal of difference between school life and college life. School life is a life of restrictions and control, a life in which the student has to be accountable for his daily work with his teachers and his guardians. A college student, on the other hand, enjoys a much greater freedom and less control and supervision; he is, to a very large extent, the master of his own destiny. It lies with him to make it or mar it.

At school, the student has to prepare his daily lessons and may be task for what he has left undone. But at college, he can do his lessons or not at all, as fancy may please or conscience may dictate. He is left to his own resources; he must understand his difficulties, and find out ways and means to remove them. He must, for the most part, depend upon himself and take the help of a friend or a teacher only as his means and circumstances permit. In one respect, however, school life is more than college life.

A student can run about and exercise his limbs in school more vigorously than at college. The sight of boys shouting and running down the stairs or the corridors or in the school quadrangle is something that one seldom finds in a college. College boys are either boisterous and rowdy or grave and decorous. They must behave like grown-up people. Of course, the college happens to have its playgrounds, they can go there after school hours and take part in regular games. A college, in other words, may permit uproarious merriment, but it often gives larger opportunities for organized games and sports.

If I am asked to choose between school life and college life, it will not be something very easy. At school, I looked with envy and expectation at my seriousness and the ample freedom they enjoyed both at home and outside. Now at college I look back sometimes to those days when I could 'feel my life in every limb' and I was full of more laughter and merriment than I can ever be in life.

For somehow I have a feeling that the gracious, sun-lit days of gaiety, thoughtlessness and the care-free pursuit of knowledge will soon be over, and it is not for me anymore to give way to 'the loud laughter that speaks the vacant mind'. And yet perhaps, in a final view, college life, in spite of its cares and burdens, is the most pleasant and exciting period in one's life. The sense of freedom, if nothing else, is in itself a tonic and an incentive to higher things.

CRICKET V/S HOCKEY

Cricket is a game wherein two gatherings of 11 alternate batting and gathering runs, though the other group bowls and fields the ball to hold the rival back from making runs. Batting and handling are switched back and forth between the two groups. Then again, Hockey is a game wherein two groups of 11 players contend to strike a little, firm ball into their resistance net with sticks that are twisted at the hitting end. It's normally called field hockey to separate it from ice hockey, which is a practically identical game. Cricket is England's true mid-year game, and it is at present famous across Australia, the West Indies, the British Isles, India, Pakistan, and so on.

Cricket passion dominates our national sport hockey. There is no doubt that today cricket is diminishing other sports in our country. Every child in school is taught that hockey is national game but cricket is known by birth in the nation.

It's very common sight that every street corner you can see children playing cricket in Pakistan, but children don't know how to play or the rules involved in hockey? An aspiring sports child who is almost as tall as the cricket bat he says that someday he would be like Shahid Afridi or Babar Azam. Why not like hockey players Sohail Abbas or Hanif Khan? In reality it's very simple that they don't know who these famous players are. It's the parents, society or schools should be blamed and it is their responsibility to teach the national sport or other sports.

You will be more successful, and productive if you are enthusiastic about your chosen path. If you are passionate about science or fashion design or literature or astronomy or business, then opt for it without caring what others choose. Many students choose a particular field based on prevailing social trends, the insistence of family, peer pressure, or lack of information about other choices, not because of their genuine interest in that field. Ultimately, after some time, they find no motivation to continue. In the long run, this lack of motivation leads to dissatisfaction and negative emotional experience. Every field offers potential growth, success, and satisfaction if you excel in it by putting your heart and soul into it.

OR — Write a Report about student week held in the college (Include events, days and dates).

ANSWER:REPORT ABOUT STUDENT WEEK

In the month of February, our college organized a student week that was held in our college. This event started on 6th February and ended on 9th February. The chief guest was the mayor of our city. Parents were invited to attend the event. The faculty team of our college supervised with volunteers.

The chief guest lit the lamp. Then our principal, secretary, and teachers also lit the lamp and the program started with prayer. The program was hosted by a student of intermediate. His performance was impressive. First of all, students presented a welcome program by welcoming the chief guest and parents of the students.

This event consisted of different programs and competitions, the first competition was held on 6th February after the welcome. It was a speech competition on "the importance of education" between the students. All students participated in this competition and express their opinions. Judges made the results and reserved for the prize distribution day.

On the second day on 7th February, eight groups of students played a drama. All the dramas they presented were funny and interesting. They engaged the audience and making them laugh. Some more students performed various programs and amused the audience.

On the third day of the event, the college's management organized different sports events among the different teams of the college. This event included badminton, races, frog jumping and some other activities.

9th February was the last day of the event that was specified for the results and prize distribution. This program was held at the auditorium of the college. Our English teacher hosted this program. In the beginning, different teachers express their opinion about the whole event, after the session results and prize distribution started, for prize distribution the host requested the chief guest and the Principal to come on stage and give certificates to the winning candidates. In the end, the host requested the chief guest to express his thoughts regarding the event.

Chief Guest came and gave a speech. He told about his career and praised the students' performance. After that, the principal thanked everyone especially the chief guest for giving his precious time. The principal ended the program by encouraging the students to work hard if they want to make a strong and good career in life. All the people who attended that student week enjoyed most. In fact, this was a memorable event.

Q5. Write a narrative account of an incident that influenced you greatly.

ANSWER:

There are many events in life that have a great impact on a person's personality. A similar incident happened to me when I was a 10th-standard student. In this age, we do not value time. A science exhibition was organized by the Board of Secondary Education in which students from different schools were invited to display their projects. Do First, second and third position students will be given certificates along with prizes.

The teachers made a group of four boys, and because I was a good student, they chose my name as the group leader. We built a small solar-powered car. Our teacher helped us a lot in its preparation. Since I was the group leader, I was also responsible for explaining the details to the visitors of the exhibition. For which I had prepared a lot.

On the day of the exhibition, which was a Saturday, we friends thought we would have breakfast outside and after that, I would go to the exhibition while the rest of the friends would go to play cricket. While the other three boys in the group were not from our neighbourhood, so they were not included in this program.

When we were going out for breakfast, we were late because everyone was leaving home late and by the time we reached for breakfast, it was half past nine, which was the time we were given to reach the expo centre. I told my friends that I am late, I am going, but my friends said that there is nothing wrong with going late, no one comes in the morning, and I was satisfied after listening to them. I didn't realise the time that pass for breakfast and talking. When I looked at the time, it was half past ten. I woke up early and left for the expo centre on a bike with my friend. When I reached there around 11 o'clock, there was a rush and people were lining up to go inside, so I also joined the lining.

It took me twenty minutes to reach the school stall when I reached there, my physics teacher scolded me a lot for coming late, after which she said that the responsibility given to you has been given to another boy because you are late. Due to attendance, your name could not be included in the list prepared by the organizers of the exhibition. I returned home after watching the exhibition with a broken heart, but the event of that day had a profound impact on my life. I realized the time constraint. Now I try to arrive early wherever I want to go so that I don't have to be embarrassed and regretful like that day again.

OR — Write an essay to compare and contrast on any one of the following:

- i) Physical Classes v/s Online Classes
- ii) Football v/s Cricket

1) PHYSICAL CLASSES V/S ONLINE CLASSES
Physical classes create a face-to-face- environment for teachers and students. In this mode of teaching, everyone can interact with each other.

The physical classroom includes a board, projectors, class monitors, teachers while in online classes' students and teachers connect online, this teaching model online whiteboards, screen sharing, and video conferencing to conduct live classes and discussions with students. In a physical classroom, the teacher is free to move the learners, grouping them in different ways and laying out the class in a way that make the activities run smoothly. Most online classes use conferencing software which can make breakout groups and different arrangements for learners possible in the classroom. However, in reality, the most common way to conduct online lessons is often for the teacher or presenter to address the group as a whole. Because of this, online classes work best when limited to a smaller number of people.

In online classes, lack of visual feedback is a common challenge for teachers. When presenting directly to an audience in the same room, we are able to adapt our delivery depending on visual feedback from the audience. A room full of bored faces is a sure sign to a presenter or teacher that they need to introduce a more interesting activity or adapt their delivery to engage the audience more. In the online classroom, a more astute presenter will make full use of the tools available to get similar feedback. Regular questions to the audience which they can respond to with voting tools are a useful way to check that the attendees are engaged in a live online session.

The anonymity of not being physically present in a classroom can also be a benefit to learners attending online sessions. Learners who feel shy to speak or raise their own issues in a physical classroom may often feel more confident when they know they can't be seen by other members of the class. Like learners with a physical disability which limits their participation in traditional classroom activities are at no disadvantage in a virtual classroom where all participants are equal.

To sum up, while there are differences between physical and online learning, in the hands of a well-trained teacher, both delivery methods can be used to achieve the same goals. Which one you choose depends on the logistics of delivering your training as much as the subject matter being taught. However, in a more and more globalized workplace, live online learning is becoming an increasingly obvious choice for any professional development program.

ii) FOOTBALL V/S CRICKET

Cricket and football are popular games with huge fan bases, one of the main differences between them is in the way the game is played. In a football game, all the competing players play simultaneously, with a ball being kicked between two goalposts at various distances within the field. The different teams try to win against each other by hitting the goalpost, whereas for a cricket game, all the team players do not play simultaneously.

competing teams, one group focuses on batting while the other focuses on bowling.

Cricket is far more interesting with so many ways in which one could bat or ball. There are so many rules and guidelines which only make the game more strategic and fun. There are so many things that can happen in the last over while I would personally say that football is all about a bunch of boys running after a ball trying to get it across a net.

The players of cricket do not need to be exceptionally fit and well-built, football requires rigorous training and a well-maintained physique in order to be a well-accomplished player. They are more active and have to keep running around the whole time which requires far more stamina and speed. There is not much running around required for cricket where players simply have to hold their positions and wait for their turns to run after the ball. Football requires so much from each player at the same time.

There seems to be no conclusion to the debate of which is a better sport cricket or football. Each of them appeals to people differently. Some might prefer watching or playing cricket for its strategies while some might like football for the adrenaline rush that accompanies it.

Players of both games require specific skills and pieces of training. While football might not be all that appealing to a larger audience in Pakistan, it is to be noted that it is fast gaining momentum with time. It won't be long until we could be finding the sport as appealing as cricket is today, though there is no replacing one with the other.

Q3. Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow:

OR

Make a précis of the passage and suggest a suitable title to it.

It is rare to find someone with good technical and communication skills. You can get far ahead of your colleagues if you combine the two early in your career. People will judge, evaluate, promote or block you based on your communication skills. Since habits form by repeating both good and bad forms of communication, learn to observe great communicators and adopt their styles and traits—in written and verbal forms. The art of listening and learning from each and every interaction, is another secret recipe. Develop the subconscious habit of listening to yourself as you speak and know when to pause.

Learning what not to say is probably more important than learning what to say. As your career develops, you will realize that the wise speak less. Speak when you have value to add, else refrain. Poorly constructed emails with grammatical errors are acceptable between friends, but they should be seriously avoided while communicating formally with your seniors. Avoid any communication in an emotional state when you might say things you will regret later. One unnecessary word uttered at the wrong time or place can ruin a relationship, career or even your life. Such is the power of words.

such a thing happens, you should immediately apologise, else it may haunt you for life.

Another problem to overcome is speaking too fast. Since our minds are working faster than our speech, we are inclined to speak fast. This does not necessarily mean that the person hearing it will get it any faster. On the contrary, it is always the reverse. So slow down, and think before you speak. "When I get ready to speak to people," Abraham Lincoln said, "I spend two-third of the time thinking what they want to hear and one-third thinking what I want to say." Adding humour and wit is also essential. But realize that not all jokes are funny and observe certain boundaries. Never say anything that could offend. Remember you are not a comedian who must offend as many people as you can to be witty.

(a) Why is it necessary to have good communication skills?

ANSWER: Because people will judge, evaluate, promote or block you based on your communication skills.

(b) How can communication skills be developed?

ANSWER: By repeating both good and bad forms of communication, learning to observe great communicators and adopting their styles and traits – in written and verbal forms.

(c) Give a suitable title to the passage.

ANSWER: Communication Skills

(d) Identify regular and irregular verbs

i) Develop ii) speak iii) hear iv) think

VERBS	TYPE

Q5. Write a narrative account of experiences at a sport meet.

ANSWER:

I used to be very active in sports and games when I was in primary school. I won the B Division long jump and was a decent sprinter. As a result, I was chosen to represent the school in the long jump and relay events at the Junior Sports Meet.

The event lasted two days. I had no events scheduled for the first day. So I kept myself busy by watching the others compete. We weren't allowed to go near the VIP pavilion as kids, so I had to observe the proceedings from afar. Large tents were provided for the young competitors opposite the VIP pavilion on the other side of the track. My school team was assigned the last tent that was furthest from the track. It was just our luck but we made the best use of what we had.

The next day, I was getting ready for my events. The long jump was scheduled for the early afternoon, followed by the 8 x 50 m relay later in the afternoon. I thought I was a pretty good jumper, but as the competition began, I realized I was vastly outclassed. 3.65 m was not bad. Then there was the typhoon, which jumped over 4 meters! That was quite an accomplishment for a ten-year-old boy. The fact that he was wearing a medal made things even more difficult for the other competitors. We finished our jumps, and I came in fourth place, just missing out on a medal.

That was disappointing, but I reminded myself that we still had a chance in the 8 x 50 m relay, for which I was assigned to run the fifth leg. The date arrived. We filed into our assigned spots and prepared for the race. After a tense minute or so, I heard the starter's gun go off. When the runners took off, I watched with bated breath as my team runners kept up with the others. As they got closer, I realized we were at least in second place. My turn arrived. I took the baton cleanly and began my run. The air moved past me as I moved closer to the next runner. Then disaster struck! I was hit by a boy who ran across the track into my path out of nowhere. I couldn't get away from him fast enough. We were sent somersaulting over him after colliding with a crunch. Because I was young and agile, I was able to quickly get myself up and continue the race. However, the collision cost us valuable time. I handed the baton to the next runner. I knew everything was lost when he ran with all his might, but it was too late. We'd blown our chance at a medal. We were young at the time and didn't know what to say. As a result, we assumed it was bad luck. I, for one, felt terrible for letting the team down, but what was done was done, and we had no choice but to accept it. As a result, I left the meet empty-handed. It had been an eventful but unsatisfactory day for me. Anyway, I learned about failure and success and how to deal with them, and I am grateful for the lessons.

OR — Write an essay to compare and contrast on any one of the following:
(i) Theory v/s Practical (ii) Books v/s Internet

ANSWER:

(i) THEORY V/S PRACTICAL

Theoretical learning is an education system where a student gains knowledge through theories, information, concepts, and facts about a subject. At the beginning, theoretical knowledge can be the primary foundation to move into practical learning. Children and students practice theoretical learning by reading textbooks, pdfs, and articles.

Theoretical learning is always accompanied by memorizing information. It is a whole lot of theory that students find it best to absorb through theoretical learning. Through this mode of education, one can learn the concept behind a particular piece of work through a lot of reasoning and logic.

Practical learning as the name clearly suggests is learning through practical real-life experience. It is learning by doing which helps you gain practical knowledge and insight into things. It is a type of learning that prepares for the real world so that you know exactly what to do in a particular situation.

Everything learned in a practical teaching environment, incorporates lifelong retention of knowledge. Everything is done in a completely fun, innovative, out-of-the-box, and interesting manner. It is here that you put your theoretical knowledge to the test and use it to experiment with what you have learned.

A major criterion that separates practical knowledge from that theoretical, is the former's vast use in everyday walks of life. Practical knowledge also ensures an accurate application of the learned skills and techniques, unlike theoretical knowledge. For example, well-established firms today are eyeing and admitting professionals who do possess not essentially the scholarly theories or information of the assigned job but these professionals are expected to have a sound ability to apply all this in appropriate situations, hence proving beneficial for the firm. This is one such concrete difference between people having practical knowledge and those with theoretical knowledge.

(ii) BOOKS V/S INTERNET

In today's world, more and more people use the Internet. Some of them think that books are obsolete and every piece of information you need is on the Internet. I strongly believe that the World Wide Web is more useful than books.

First of all, the Internet is a more comprehensive source of knowledge. There are billions of subjects about everything. Everybody can find some information for him. The main advantage of this is that you don't have to use the table of contents and go through the whole book.

Secondly, all the books you need are online. There are existing eBooks and Audiobooks, which can replace traditional books. For instance, you mustn't go to a library and check it out, you can just download it at home. As a result, it's quicker and more comfortable.

Moreover, the Internet is multimedia. In a book is only black text on white paper, while on the Internet are many animations and pictures, which can help you to remember and understand modern issues.

The argument against using the Internet is that it isn't a reliable source of information. There are a lot of mistakes made by users. Books have more plausible issues, which makes them better sources of knowledge.

Q3. Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow:

OR

Make a précis of the passage and suggest a suitable title to it.
 Advertising was initially meant to make people aware of the goods and services in the market. It was as simple as announcing what you have in your premises. Over the years, advertising evolved into a major industry that beyond informing to persuading and influencing. It is a form of brainwashing consumers.

Advertising has become a type of culture with ardent followers. In the process, it attracts enviable attention from manufacturers and service providers who fancy an edge over their competitors. Unfortunately, in keeping with the ever-increasing demands of the manufacturers, the advertisers have resulted to creating unnecessary wants and excess consumption in most of us. This is a craving for harmful products that we are better off without. It preys on our minds rendering us completely irrational. The billboards (hoardings), television and radio advertisements target us from a very early age, forming our view of the world as we grow into adults. The buzzwords in advertising are, 'you are cool and sophisticated', if you use this or that product.

The notion that the media is primarily in place to give us news is not very true. If the truth may be told, the media is there to gather enough audience, package them into a pricey commodity and sell it to the advertisers. The advertisers, on the other hand, are always on the lookout for a target audience to persuade them that this product of service is better than that of the competitor.

Advertising does influence people. Most of the advertisements are filled with images that equate emotional well-being with material acquisition and associate independence and leisure with consumption of alcohol. Advertising also makes people lavish their on products rather than real people, thereby destroying human relationships. We have become trapped in the web of advertising where products like brands of beer and cigarette take over our minds, doing away with our core family values.

When you look critically at most of the advertisements on the television, you will discover how persuasive the advertisers are in deciding for us what, when, how much and why to buy. But most people think that they are not influenced by advertisements. This is precisely what the advertisers want us to think, that in the end 'the people decide'. If you think deeply, nobody in this profit-minded sense will pay so much money to make a thirty second advertisement, which might not be seen by a hundred people, leave alone convince them to buy. How we strike a healthy balance between the two will definitely have a direct bearing on the future of our country.

(a) What was the purpose of advertising?

ANSWER: Advertising was meant to make people aware of the goods available in the market.

(b) How do advertisements make us irrational?

ANSWER: Advertising create unnecessary wants and excess consumption in most of us. This is a craving for harmful products that we are better off without. It preys on our minds rendering us completely irrational.

(c) How does advertising affect us?

ANSWER: Advertising does influence people. Most of the advertisements are filled with images that equate emotional well being with material acquisition and associate independence and leisure with consumption of alcohol.

(d) What do you discover when you look at advertisement critically?

ANSWER: How persuasive the advertisers are in deciding for us what, when, how much and why to buy.

5. Write a narrative account of the end of the holidays you are playing. Chess is played between two individuals, however, outdoor games such as football or cricket require 11 players per team. Whereas golf requires only one. In general, there are a few exceptions when it comes to the number of players in both outdoor and indoor games. Indoor games ~~usually~~ depend on mental ability or luck, while outdoor games generally require physical strength. The rules of different sports prompt different technical developments. Gradually, players adapt or learn these techniques in time. A chess player, for example, is not obliged to know how to score a goal or dribble past a player. Those techniques are solely for football players.

(ii) SCIENCE V/S ARTS

Both science and arts are subjects that help us to understand and describe the world around us. During the educational journey, students are usually exposed to both subjects so that they can choose any one of them that they will pursue in future. Students will decide and choose their core subjects to specialize in in college and university.

In my point of view, I completely agree with the statement that it is more advantageous to study science than arts subjects in university. It is because science helps to acquire a variety of jobs, helps to stimulate the brain and aids to have a better understanding of the world. First and foremost, science helps university students to acquire a variety of jobs when it comes to career choice. Students can find ideal jobs in any sector that they want and specialize in it. Fresh graduate students from science can get plenty of jobs which they can choose their jobs even not related to science such as human resources, business management and much more. Science is broad and university students can learn about the universe and living things around the world which never bore. In addition, science helps to stimulate the brain. If a student desires to challenge and stimulate his brain in order to become smart, he can consider the option of choosing science.

Students who study science usually have specific skills that help them stimulate their brains better than others who study arts. It is because science enables student to use their brain power and mental strength in some complex or difficult areas. They are typically smart which makes them achieve success in particular fields. Last but not least, science aids to have a better understanding of the world. By studying science, students get a better understanding of the world. They learn about how the world came to be and the things that make up the world. When students study subjects like Biology, Physics, and Chemistry, they will get a better picture of the world.

Science projects will force students to think out of the box with scientific theory or knowledge that can happen within the scope of the whole world and even beyond it. In a nutshell, there are both arguments for and against which subjects is more advantageous in universities; arts or science related. However, I still think that science-related subjects will help university students to achieve success and proficiency in their life.

ANSWER:

The holidays are coming to an end. The holidays had been fantastic. I was to complete the majority of my planned activities, such as camping, visiting friends, and watching videos at home. The previous five weeks had been extremely hectic. A lot of unexpected things happened, but they were pleasant.

In a few days, the year's Monday will arrive. I'll be returning to school, possibly the last time because next year I'll be in college. It will be an exam year so I will have to focus more on my studies. I can't keep messing around like this year. The college will not be like that. In fact, that will be a good year.

I'll have to start preparing for the new semester. I need new shoes and a bag to carry my books in. The old ones are already beyond repair. Also, I need some pens and other writing materials. Other than these things I probably have all I will need for the coming year. Anything else necessary will be evident when the time comes.
